Comment Of The Day

Nuclear power for the colony

THERE is one aspect of the Electricity Commission of Inquiry report which has so far received little comment. That is the proposal of a nuclear plant for distilling sea water and generating electricity. The Commission felt the nationalisation of the electric companies in this respect would be an advantage because the plant could be used by Government for both purposes. The value of this project is still problematical, however, and Government would be unwise to allow itself to be influenced by the Commission's argument.

It is true that the electricity companies individually have expressed interest in generating by this method. It is also true that neither could alone afford such costly equipment or make full use of such a plant in their present divided sphere of operations. But assuming it does offer a practicable means of distilling useful quantities of water, there are equal if not greater advantages in employing it in conjunction with electricity companies run by private enterprise. We suggest three ways in which this might be done:

THE two companies could share the cost of the plant and rent distillation facilities to Government. Or Government could finance the project entirely and supply power to both companies at fixed prices and thus indirectly control charges to the consumer. Or there could be a three-way investment. Government and the two electricity companies supplying the capital, which would mean a considerably reduced outlay of public funds on the distillation plant.

It would incidentally be interesting to know whether Government is still considering this project as an alternative to the Plover Cove fresh water lakes scheme. Perhaps more information could be given in this month's budget speeches. Because there is an urgent need to press on with one or the other as soon as possible.

NATION-WIDE RAIL STRIKE

Union decision after wage talks collapse

London, Jan. 29. Railway Union leaders tonight called a nation-wide strike after their demands for an immediate pay increase had been rejected.

About 350,000 workers in the National Union of Railwaymen were ordered to quit work from February 15.

The decision resulted from negotiations aimed at calling off a 24-hour token strike threatened by London railroad workers for next Monday.

At the same time the union leaders instructed their members not to take strike action before the given date. This may cancel the unofficial 24-hour strike which was to have been staged on Monday.

Rejected

Sir Brian Robertson, chairman of the state-controlled British Transport Commission, tonight rejected the union's request for an immediate pay rise. He told the NUR leaders they must await the report of an independent pay committee, expected early in April, as two other smaller railway unions had decided to do. Sir Brian had already promised to back-date any pay award to January 11.

Now wages by cheque

London, Jan. 28. The House of Commons tonight approved a bill to allow an employer in Britain to pay a worker's wages into a banking account, by postal order, money order or cheque.

The old law was made over 100 years ago to ensure that wage earners, mostly manual workers, got paid in cash and not in kind or by any other means. It put an end to abuses by unscrupulous employers.

The aim of the new law is to beat the present wave of wage grabbing holdups.—Special.

Gen. MacArthur

New York, Jan. 29. Gen. Douglas MacArthur was admitted to hospital for "medical observation and study" it was announced today.—UPI.

HOUNDS KILLED KITTEN INSTEAD OF FOX

London, Jan. 28. The Beaufort hunt was after a fox in Gloucestershire county, but instead they killed a little girl's pet cat. Newspapers today describe how the hounds came bounding over the garden wall of the Fletcher family's house in the small town of Tetbury. Twelve-year-old Carol Fletcher's pet cat Whisky met the hounds and was killed. Carol's mother is today quoted as saying: "Whisky was sitting on the back doorstep when the hounds came rushing over the wall."

"He died for his life, but before he could get very far they had seized him and torn him to pieces."

Last night Major Gerald Gandy, joint Master of the Hunt with the Duke of Beaufort, called on Carol and offered her another kitten. But the heart-broken girl refused. She also declined the offer of a puppy.—China Mail Special.

Top golfer's secret ambition

By A CHINA MAIL REPORTER
Leading world professional golf champion, Australian Peter Thompson, today revealed a secret ambition — to paint Hongkong.

Thompson, who is here to compete in the SCM P&G Open, told a China Mail reporter today that he was an ardent artist.

"Whenever I am off the course I always hurry to the easel and splash around with my paints."

"Mind you, my painting is not equal to my golf but I get a big kick out of trying my hand at it."

"Before I leave on February 8, I hope to be able to perch myself on the hillside over Kowloon and put my impression of this wonderful city on canvas."

"I don't think it would take more than half a day and it would be something I would be really keen on doing," he added.

Mr Thompson arrived in Hongkong on Thursday. Fellow Australian Keri Nagle, Eric Cramlin and others competing in the championship will arrive next week.

Apart from his artistic ambition, Mr Thompson hopes that he will snap up the first prize. "I'll have stiff opposition, but I am confident of putting up a fair show."

HK tourist boom

Washington, Jan. 29. Hongkong was attracting almost as many tourists as Tokyo, an American Airlines chief said today.

He was Mr E. O. Cooke of Trans-World Airlines, who headed the Civil Aeronautics Board today for permission to extend its international route beyond India to Hongkong and Tokyo via Bangkok.—Reuters.

Casey's successor

Melbourne, Jan. 29. The Minister for Trade, Mr John McEwen, is now being strongly tipped in the Canberra diplomatic corps as successor to Lord Casey as Minister for External Affairs, the Melbourne Herald's Canberra correspondent reported today. Other possibilities: Sir Garfield Barwick, the Attorney General; China Mail Special.

Defiant reaction in Algiers to de Gaulle's speech

Algiers, Jan. 29. The insurgent settlers behind the barricades greeted President Charles de Gaulle's speech tonight with shouts of "de Gaulle to the gallows."

The defiant cry summed up the reaction of the men behind the barricades to a speech which made not the slightest concession to their demand for which they declared themselves ready to die.

Oran reaction

The French news agency however tonight reported that territorial militia units in Oran, Algeria, have rallied to the army after the radio appeal of President de Gaulle and Corps Commander Gen. Ferdinand Gamblet.

The same type militia units are holding barricades in Algiers in defiance of the government.

Good soldiers

He said the rebels had "fired on the forces of order and they killed good soldiers. They are raising their arms against the authority of France."

My destiny

"I beseech you to return to order."

Stop thief

Gothenburg, Jan. 28. An exhibition here on ways and means of preventing burglaries, called "Stop The Thief," has been visited by thieves—who stole about six "thief-proof" locks.—Special.

NE WIN LEAVES COLONY

Burmese soldier-statesman, Premier Ne Win left Hongkong this morning after a 17-hour stopover in the Colony. He arrived yesterday after an eight-hour flight from Peking where he concluded with the Chinese Premier, Mr Chou En-lai, an agreement on the Sino-Burmese border and a non-aggression pact.

His special Union of Burma Airways Viscount flew him back to Rangoon this morning.

When he arrives, a simultaneous announcement from Peking and Rangoon will give full details of the new agreements.

17-21 page begins

next week

The China Mail's 17-21 Club page begins next Saturday's issue.

It contains several entries by the Club's first members.

Now the editor is at work on the second week's page and entries are already being received for this.

Letters, art, our best photographs, short-short stories, articles—all these are welcome and, if published, can win prizes.

Be in the swim and join the 17-21 Club now. It aims to cover everything of interest for Hongkong's youth.

Stole spares from liner Queen Mary

Southampton, Jan. 28. Kenneth Shiers, a dock hand admitted today that he stole 12 of the main propeller shaft bearings of the liner Queen Mary.

The bearings were stolen between December 15 and January 21 while the liner was in dry dock. Their value was fixed by the owners at £1,320.

Those which disappeared were spares carried in the liner for emergency repairs at sea.

At a court hearing Shiers, 33, was ordered held in custody pending trial. "I shall plead guilty," he told the court.—AP.

B-25 found

Washington, Jan. 27. The wreckage of a B-25 Mitchell bomber has been found high in the New Guinea mountains where it crashed nearly 10 years ago during World War II, the army said today.

Heat kills 13

Sydney, Jan. 27. Searing heat—the worst in the city's history—has caused the death of at least 13 people in Sydney in the last few days.

THE BRITISH GENERAL ELECTRIC CO., LTD.
Showrooms: Alexandra House Arcade Tel. 36151

London, Jan. 29. The Year of the Rat began today for Chinese people all over the world including about 2,000 in London.

Last night 80 Hongkong students sat down to a Chinese New Year dinner at Hongkong House and were given packets of "lucky money."

But there were no traditional firecrackers. "I believe neighbours complained last year," a student said.

This weekend there will be a New Year ball at the Centre and 120 students have booked tickets.

Mr Chong Mong Young, owner of Shaftesbury Avenue's Hongkong Restaurant, held two children's parties for about 100 Chinese youngsters. The waiters played trumpets and gongs.

Michelle Mok, 17-year-old "Miss Hongkong" in last year's Miss World Contest who is now an up-and-coming London model said she felt that she was letting the festivities slip by.

"Last night I went out for a Chinese celebration dinner at a Chinese restaurant and I'm going to the students' dance," she said. "Other than that I'm taking things very quietly."

The cast of the Hongkong-set play "The World of Sui Wo" had a New Year's day party and Tsai Chin, 20-year-old leading lady, went with her husband, producer Peter Coy.—L.E.S.

FILMS CURRENT & COMING

by ANTHONY FULLER

"THE BIG CIRCUS"

(Roxy & Broadway) is a jolly romp under the Big Top, with comedy, melodrama, and all the fun of the fair, photographed
most brilliantly in Cinema-Scope and Technicolor.

This story of the circus is reinforced by a whodunit interpolation, and the excitement hinges on a circus proprietor fighting off some tough hangerson and a by rival, all set for a take-over bid, with a saboteur, let in to wreck the show.

The drama of the circus is ageless, so now and over-green acts never fail to enchant, but at the same time, every shot in the film is linked to the main theme.

Highlights are the tightrope walk across Niagara and the elusive troublemaker's spectacular death fall.

The popular and talented cast easily meet all the history demands made of them, while the detail and atmosphere of the circus are lively and authentic.

Taking it all round, the film has quite a number of arrows in its quiver, but before the final close-up, every arrow has been fired and found its target.

Victor Mature has seldom found a part so suitable to his personality as the brazen, irrepressible, and likeable Hask Rhonda Fleming comes out well as Helen, while Gilbert Roland trips a lively step across the wire as Zach.

Adelle Mara has the soft and sentimental role of Mama, and Red Buttons amuses as the not-so-stuffy Randy.

David Nelson completely disarms the audience as Tommy.
Obviously, when setting out to make a film of this kind, the producer intends to get in a maximum of the circus with its animals and turns, but at the same time, wants a strong story to thread them on.

"The Big Circus," succeeds here, because the animals and the turns neatly punctuate the romance and villainy of the tale.

The walk across Niagara and the final crash could not be bettered with Bertram Mills on the job. Photographed for the CinemaScope curved screen and rendered in Technicolor, you have the drama of the Big Top brought right to your doorstep.
I have no hesitation in saying that "The Big Circus" will appeal widely in the Colony, with its stars, its spectacle, and its wholesome sentiment, which affords a night's fun for the whole family.

"THEY CAME TO COR- DURA"

(Theatre Royal & State) is a gigantuan effort to keep the western film on top with a brand new kind of angle. In this case, it is the search to discover of what stuff is heroism made, and has Major Gary Cooper marching to Cordura with five heroes all nominated for the Medal of Honour.

Gary Cooper is more or less saying, "He who would valour see, let him come hither."

But, as any veteran will tell you, the winning of a medal is not necessarily quite what it seems. Note I say,
"not necessarily," for sometimes the "hero" himself has quite different ideas about the situation from those appearing in his caption.

The seasons shake Major Cooper somewhat. One chap doesn't want his medal
because the attending publicity will attract the attention of certain legal gentlemen anxious to string him up.

Another didn't know what the dickens he was doing.

Another just enjoyed idling Mexicans.

And yet another just wanted to impress his C/O and gain a little promotion.

So there you are, a long march across the desert would become monotonous performed by an all male company, we have Rita Hayworth as a sort of traitor to the U.S. who is under arrest, and attached to the band of heroes.

A closer angle of the plot is Major Cooper is no hero himself. At his awareness of the first shot fired in anger, he got down in a ditch and allowed his men to fight it out.

The idea of the film then, is very good. But somehow it doesn't get away with it.
Somewhere along the road to Cordura, one gets tired.

It is too lengthy, too long by thirty minutes, so that by the time Major Cooper and party

"LAUGH CLOWN... LAUGH!" Peter Lorre, Red Buttons, Gilbert Roland, Adelle Mara, and David Nelson, in a scene from "The Big Circus," Allied Artists (Harry Odell) Release.

The high spots are, the Japanese, walking into the trap set in the jungle, the officers on leave (I took it to be in Calcutta) and their getting drunk and the attending circumstances; the setting of the house in the hills; and from a woman's point of view, the affair between Frank Sinatra and Lolobridgia, which somehow I am unable to understand.

In theme, it is like "That Kind of Woman," Lolobridgia being that kind of woman.
I think most cinema-goers will award acting honours to Richard Johnson for his portrayal of a perfect British Officer jungle type, complete with eyeglasses.

Sinatra also comes up with a good performance as a slightly bitter American Officer in charge of a tough fighting company.
Paul Henreid as a sinister type who is making a never explained pile out of the war, fits well into the intrigue of the house in the hills, but the film leaves him, "goosey, goosey, gander, wither do you wander." We never find out.

La Lolobridgia has not much to do but fall around and look tempting. She is aided in her performance by taking a bath in a tub that Nero seems to have left around.

Well, there you are, and it comes in CinemaScope and Metrocolor.

"PILLOW TALK" (Lee & Astor)

is a streamlined sophisticated American comedy. Its humorous situations split second timed with mechanical precision.

The rollicking story is set in New York City, and opens up on a sparkling note which has Rock Hudson and Doris Day quarrelling like blazes about fair shares of party telephone line.

Obviously, the situations which can evolve from this are many, it being not so much what the butler saw as what Rock Hudson hears on the party line.

All you have to ask is, have Rock Hudson as a song writer, and Doris Day an interior decorator, both sharing a party line and dialling each other like hawks, get them to meet without each knowing the other, and you have enough situations for a dozen comedy films.

The jokes come off, the best being a talk at cross purposes between a gynaecologist's nurse and a bachelor.

Songs come pouring out (six in this film) with a rollicking
"Holy Poly" community number which seemed to me good old London Music Hall stuff.

Veteran Hollywood comedienne Thelma Ritter has some of the choice scenes in "Pillow Talk," as the housemaid to Doris Day, and as usual, she is good.
"Pillow Talk" is being shown at just the right time. Its colour, its glamour, its ultra sophistication with its sparkle and its wit make it a happy choice for Chinese New Year.

NEW FILMS AT A GLANCE

SHOWING

ROYAL & STATE: "They Came to Cordura." A prestige effort which attempts to make an analysis of courage. To achieve this, Gary Cooper co-opts Rita Hayworth and five men to Cordura where the theme is worked out in a colourful and chatty manner. Also Tab Hunter, Van Heflin, and Richard Conley.

LEE & ASTOR: "Pillow Talk." Sophisticated comedy number, light and gay with six songs thrown in. Real good production, good dialogue, and cannyly concocted situations. Rock
Hudson and Doris Day, Eugene O'Neill, and CinemaScope.

ROXY & BROADWAY: "The Big Circus." All the drama and the turns of the Big Top. Tense scenes with a good plot woven into the biggest show on earth.
Good family holiday fun

all the way. Victor Mature;
Red Buttons; and Rhonda Fleming.

HOOVER & GALA: "Never So Few." Romance set against the Burma Campaign of World War II.
Frank Sinatra and Richard Johnson as the two tough officers from the jungle.
Paul Henreid as the smooth type living in luxury, with Lolobridgia as the girl who renounces luxury for the hero from the jungle.
CinemaScope and Metro-color.

KING'S & PRINCESS: "A Hole in the Head." Sentimental story with some bright high spots, which concerns impecunious hotel keeper Frank Sinatra, and his son, Eddie Hodges.
Well meaning Edward G.
Robinson and Thelma Ritter
try to straighten things out. Good entertainment.
Big Screen and Colour by De Luxe.

COMING

ROYAL: "The Sleeping Beauty." Hongkong's long awaited introduction to Technicolor. This film is Walt Disney's version of the ageless tale, with songs and musical accompaniment from Tchaik-ovsky's "Sleeping Beauty Ballet." The biggest film event since CinemaScope.
Technicolor.

LEE & ASTOR: "Operation Petticoat." First rate
comedy, which has a U.S.
submarine sent on the cavalier operation over. This film is breaking every record during its run at Radio City. Cary Grant and Tony Curtis.

ROXY & BROADWAY: "Seven Thieves." Suspense
thriller concerning the robbing of the "bank" at Monte Carlo. Strong tale joins forces with impecunious castling. Red Buttons; Edward G. Robinson; and Joan Collins.

HOOVER & GALA: "The Rickshaw Man." The wonderful Japanese film which won the Golden Lion of St
Mark Award at the 1958
Venice Film Festival.
Charming story of a Rickshaw man who devoted his life to an Army Officer, his wife, and son. Beautifully produced and photographed in Technicolor. Also Agn
Coulour. Toshiko Miura Hideo Takamune, and Kenji Kasahara.

KING'S & PRINCESS: "The Tempest." A colourful account of an epic in Em-perial Russian history when the Cossacks rose in revolt against Catherine the Great. Spectacular. Big screen and colour. Sylvia Maiden and Yara Hovav.

No holiday for colony firemen

While the majority of the population were celebrating, the Fire Brigade on both sides of the harbour were kept busy during Chinese New Year Eve and early yesterday morning.

Over ten calls from rubbish dump fires to roof-top outbreaks were answered by the Brigade. Most of the outbreaks were caused by indiscriminate throwing of fireworks, a spokesman of the Fire Brigade said yesterday.

A wooden hut on the roof of 3, Old Gilman Street, was destroyed after vain attempts to extinguish the fire was made by residents there.

The fire was said to have been caused by glowing charcoal left unattended in a stove.

About 7.45 p.m. on Thursday, a pile of crates and old rattenware in Killing Lane off Des Voeux Road West, caught fire.

The outbreak was put out by the residents before the arrival of the Fire Brigade.

Another hut on the roof of a house in Killing Street, Shamshuipo, was destroyed by fire.

It was believed to have been started by the firing of crackers.

A blaze on the roof of No. 35, Po Shu Road, Kowloon City, completely destroyed a plastic factory.

The fire started about 8.30 p.m. and burned for nearly half an hour before fire-fighters brought it under control.

It was believed to have been started by small boys discharging small rockets.

Yesterday, a small fire occurred in the cockpit of a Chinese medicine shop in Aberdeen.

A small quantity of medicines and herbs was destroyed before the fire was put out by the inmates of the shop.

CARS DAMAGED
A motor car parked in St. Francis' Yard, Causeway Bay, was damaged by a fire which was started by exploding fire-crackers.

The rear seat of the vehicle was badly damaged.

Another car parked at Sai Yuen Choi Street was on fire at 11.30 a.m. However, the fire was extinguished by firemen immediately after their arrival.

Two separate fires broke out almost simultaneously around 12 p.m. in Kowloon.

One was at 149 Nam Cheong Street, ground floor, while the other was at No. 599 Shanghai Street. No damage was reported.

Two hurt in traffic mishap
A private car knocked down and injured two people after mounting the pavement in Castle Peak Road at 8 p.m. on Thursday.

The injured, an old woman, aged about 50, and a boy, 10, received serious injuries. At the time of the accident the two were selling towels on the pavement.

They were taken to hospital and detained.

Late HK exports causing trouble

Disclosure by colony's UK representative

Late deliveries of Hongkong exports in Europe had caused "a lot of trouble," a Hongkong Government official said yesterday.

Presentation dinner to Dr J. C. Hsia

Dr J. C. Hsia, Manager of the Hongkong Sales Office of Alcan Asia Limited, who is due to retire at the end of this month from an active business life with the Aluminum Limited group of companies, was presented with a silver crown and sash set yesterday evening by Mr J. Boetsch, President of Alcan Asia Limited.

A dinner party, attended by many of his colleagues, was held in his honour at the Golden City Restaurant.

Dr and Mrs Hsia expect to remain in Hongkong for a few months, and then plan to take up residence in Southern California.

Curio buying in China

Mr Walter Weinburger, a curio merchant, returned to Hongkong by train yesterday after a short buying trip in Peking. Mr Weinburger, who left for China in January 3, said this was the third trip he has made to China.

He is remaining here for a few days.

Introduction of new drug

Mr C. E. Mison of the Promotion Department of Smith Kline & French Laboratories Ltd., will be visiting Hongkong for two weeks from Tuesday, February 2.

He will introduce a new drug for the treatment of mental illness.

Textile chief leaves HK

Mr M. Altman, Director of Lennart and Tracey Ltd., London textile importers, left here by boat yesterday after a one-week visit.

He is at present on a world business tour visiting textile mills. He will visit Bangkok, New Delhi, Tehran and Israel before returning to London.

Off to Japan

Mr Kayser Sung, Deputy Editor of the Far Eastern Economic Review, left by CPA for Tokyo yesterday, for a three-week tour of Japanese car, radio and camera industries.

Macleod is surprised and in turn surprises

London, Jan. 28. The Colonial Secretary, Mr Iain Macleod, looked up in surprise today when a white delegate proposed that the Kenya Constitutional Conference conduct its proceedings in Swahili, a native African language.

The suggestion came from Mr Michael Blundell, leader of the multi-racial new Kenya group. Mr Blundell took exception to claims that white people living in Kenya never troubled to learn anything about the native language or culture.

Making it clear this did not apply in his case, Mr Blundell switched from English to Swahili and said: "Let's carry out our business in the language of mama Africa."

Mr Macleod pointed out that British officials attending the conference then would be unable to understand or record the proceedings.

When Mr Blundell let the matter drop, Mr Macleod brought grins to the faces of the Negro delegates by nodding gravely and saying "Asante" (thank you).—AP.

New P & O chief

London, Jan. 28. Sir Donald Forsyth Anderson, 54-year-old Deputy Chairman and Managing Director of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, has been elected Chairman. It was announced here tonight. He will succeed Sir William Currie.—Reuter.

Journalist interviewed

London, Jan. 28. Hans Kempf, the German journalist whose interview with General Massu set in motion a train of events which led to the latter's dismissal by President Charles de Gaulle, was interviewed on television tonight following his arrival today.

He said his interview with General Massu was not difficult to obtain and there was no question of it being off the record.

"I at the impression that General Massu wanted to fire a warning shot across the general's (de Gaulle's) ship."

Mr Kempf also said that some time ago M. Ortis, one of the leaders of the Algerian settlers' revolt, had told him: "In three months something will happen here."—Reuter.

Crime Against The State

BY EDGAR LUSTGARTEN

Number Three:
Roger Casement

A MAN WHO HATED ENGLAND

THE prisoner's counsel was in considerable distress. That had been growing more apparent now for several minutes. His speech to the jury had lost its fire and even its direction.

The eloquent Irishman was stumbling over words, often repeating himself, getting lost hopelessly in the middle of a sentence.

His voice, normally vibrant, sounded flat and lifeless; his face, entirely drained of any colour, stood out white as chalk in contrast with his full black beard; his brow glistened with beads of sweat that were not caused by heat.

'I have broken down'

From the bench, the Lord Chief Justice watched him anxiously. No judge has ever been more considerate than Lord Reading, nor better acquainted through his own great career as Rufus Isaacs—with the harassments and burdens of the Bar.

"Do you think Sergeant Sullivan is well enough to continue?" he whispered to Mr Justice Avory, sitting at his side.

Seconds later, Sergeant Sullivan himself supplied the answer. He stopped speaking altogether, swayed from side to side, and his fingertips hung against his temples.

"My lord, I have completely broken down," he said.

"Then, of course," said Lord Reading instantly, "we will adjourn until tomorrow."

Sergeant Sullivan dropped back into his seat and rested his head upon his outstretched arms. He knew in his heart that he would not be there tomorrow; that his junior would have to carry on as best he could; that utter and absolute exhaustion had stricken his faculties as with paralysis.

Spectacular

Painful, but not inexplicable or surprising. Great strain always devolves upon an advocate whose duty it is to defend a long capital case. But greater strain than usual devolved upon the advocate whose duty it was to defend Sir Roger Casement.

At the time of his trial for high treason, Casement—Irish-born and black-bearded like his counsel—was closely approaching the age of 53. His public record made him appear the unlikely of traitors.

As a young man, he had joined the British Consular service in which he carved out a brilliant, even spectacular career. In 1905 he had been created CMG. In 1911 he had been knighted.

In 1913, when he retired on grounds of health, he had joined that small band of postulated officials who are both sustained and honoured by a grateful England.

Nevertheless—and notwithstanding outward professions of reciprocal gratitude and loyalty—the dominant mood that Casement took with him into retirement was a passionate and overwhelming hatred of the English.

It matters little now from what sources this hatred had sprung: slights fancied or actual, office fouds, disparagement of his qualities. All that matters is—all that overmattered—was the existence of such hatred; for in this negative emotion the real roots of his conduct can be found.

Hatred of the English made him a militant Irish separatist. Hatred of the English made him a Germanophile. And it was still basically hatred of the English, not concern for the interests of the Germans or the Irish, that made him, during the 1914-18 war, enter Germany in secret and try to seduce captured Irish troops from their allegiance.

With German approval and support, he visited their prison camp, urging them to form themselves into an Irish Brigade, designed to fight against, instead of on behalf of, England.

His solicitations fell almost entirely on deaf ears. The idea of an "Irish Brigade" was quickly dropped. Other plans, however, apparently went forward, and during the night of April 20, 1916, Casement landed from a U-boat on the Kerry coast with two companions and attendant vessel full of guns.

He was seized within hours, and the guns never reached the hands for which they were intended. But on April 23, exactly three days later, the bloody and terrible Easter Rising detonated in Dublin.

Coincidence

Few in England failed to mark the coincidence of dates; and that, perhaps more than any other single factor, accounts for the exceptional public fury focused upon Casement during the nine weeks which he spent in the Tower of London and at Brixton Prison waiting to be tried.

The Crown, though, did not subsequently seek to prove any connection between Casement and the Rising. "Whether he conceived of the innocent blood which was so soon to flow," said the Attorney-General (Sir F. E. Smith), "I cannot tell you, for I do not know."

Which course?

It is probably concentrated his fire on Casement's addresses to the prisoners of war, and as some of these men had been exchanged and were available as witnesses, his position in that respect was virtually secure. Prejudice rampant, facts unappreciated. With an aspect to reason or to feeling equally unpropitious, what was the wisest course for the hard-pressed defence?

There were three possible alternatives. Either Casement could stand trial unrepresented, make no attempt at a legal answer to the charge, and deliver instead a political oration aimed at exciting world-wide sympathy for Ireland. That is what Casement himself wanted to do. But it would have meant losing the trial by default.

With favour

Or they could try to get a verdict of guilty but insane. That is what the prosecution wanted them to do. With an apprehensive eye upon opinion in the land of our potential ally, the United States, the English authorities would have looked with favour on that plea.

But, save that Casement was a practicing homoeopath (as disclosed by his own diaries in the Crown's possession), nothing indicated abnormality of mind. Or they could rely upon a technical point of law, and contend that upon a proper construction of the statute, treason cannot be committed outside the King's realm. That is what Sergeant Sullivan wanted to do—and so, in his mature professional judgment as defender, that alone offered any chance of complete immunity. It was ultimately agreed that he should do it.

So when, after many hours of strenuous argument, the Lord Chief Justice and his colleagues ruled against him on that issue, Sullivan had seen his last faint hopes depart.

Manfully, though, he had struggled on, like the courageous and conscientious advocate he was. Facing now, not the judges, but the jury, he painted a picture of divided—and unhappy—Ireland as an explanatory background to his client's acts. The Ulstermen "illegally arming and drilling" (this with a side-long glance at the Attorney-General who had been one of Ulster's most aggressive champions); their open challenge to the King and Commons; the fear of southern Irishmen that police and army might prove inadequate for their protection and support.

Last reserves

"During the war," Sergeant Sullivan was asserting, "more arms were coming in to Ulster; and—"

"Where is the evidence of that?" Lord Reading's beautiful voice was quiet but compelling. "I felt so anxious not to intervene while you were making your speech, but you are dealing with matters which have not been stated in evidence."

Sergeant Sullivan reflected, and then bowed.

"My Lord," he said, "If I have been carried away too far, I am exceedingly sorry."

The intervention was justified and courteous, the acknowledgment dignified and handsome. In another case, at another time, the incident would have been trivial, something hardly noticed and immediately forgotten.

But in this case, at this time, its effect on Sergeant Sullivan was out of all proportion to its own importance. It destroyed his mental poise, sapped his last reserves of nervous strength, and with frightening rapidity led to his physical collapse.

Sergeant Sullivan's compulsory withdrawal did not inflict any injury on Casement. His conviction had by then become a certainty. That conviction, moreover, was unquestionably right; so was the decision to refuse him a reprieve. Whether the latter was expedient is another question.

On the morning of Casement's execution, a leading English journal expressed profound regret that ministerial clemency had not been exercised. "Of a man discredited otherwise before the world," it wrote, "they have made a martyr to live long in the traditions of Ireland."

So Casement has done. And so Casement will.

THE saga of Wagging Parva is continuing. His attempts to induce Prida of Walsall to yield limed milk, in order to avoid the labour of weekend milking.

Her tinful mash is mixed with barbitic tetrasulphide, meliol, granules G, dlogener, mulsomel, mimosic oxide, nitric ozonaseatin, ammoniated phosphorus, and calcetic bellium, in unequal parts. The cow is at present lying down, not to forecast rain, but, probably, to contemplate the marvels of modern science, before submitting to 14 injections of gaseous hypersulfurium.

The S.P.C.M. protests

THE Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Motorists is protesting against the suggestion that there should be sterner laws to deal with drivers who commit offences. "A driver who is subjected to excessive interference," said a spokesman, "becomes bad-tempered and defiant, like a delinquent who is treated too unkindly. The proper method to use with careless or criminal drivers is to try to understand them, not to give them a grievance against society by treating them harshly."

Gracious living

THE offer of free psychiatry in American restaurants is worthy of close study. If the idea that every customer is a patient catches on, other free services should be provided: tranquillising pills with the soup, the attention of a hypnotist with the fish, encouraging pills with the meat, overhauling by a physician with the pudding. With the arrival of the coffee a psychologist should examine every customer who has taken this course of treatment with his meal, in order to find out what on earth is the matter with him. And should a dentist not visit every table between courses?

The groaning board

THE Egg Board announces the return to our tables of that wartime delicacy, dried eggs. On firm, catering for those who appreciate culinary enterprise, is almost ready to supply, in little tins, a mixture of dried egg and powdered bacon in liquid form. You insert a hygienic straw through a hole in the tin, and drink your breakfast, winding up with little pellets of frozen toast impregnated with near-butter and processed mammalado drops.

REDIFFUSION

POPULAR TEEN-AGE SHOW

RETURNS TO THE AIR

"Rumpus Time," the Colony's most popular Teen-age Show returns on Rediffusion's Blue Network this afternoon at 4 o'clock, by popular request.

The team of Ron Ross and Ray Cordeiro will be at the helm as before, with music by Glancarlo and his Italian Combo. Each edition of Rumpus Time will feature some of Hongkong's most popular singing stars. There will be many interesting contests and competitions arranged by Ron Ross to add to the fun and gaiety of the hundred odd teenagers who will attend each programme by invitation.

The star this week on Movietown Theatre is Jane Darwell, whose childhood ambition was to be an opera singer. In fact her first important professional appearance was at the Chicago Opera House Stock Company. (This was followed by parts in many Broadway shows including "Swords," "Seeds in your eye" and "Dolls House." A seven-year contract with 20th Century-Fox followed and Jane appeared in the following pictures "White Parade," "Jesse James," "Grapes of Wrath," "Three Wise Fools," "My Darling Clementine," and "Ox Bow Incident." On Wednesday at 9 o'clock Jane Darwell will star in a play called "Sugarin' the Vinegar."

TELEVISION

FIRST OF A SERIES OF LATE NIGHT FEATURES

At 9.45 tonight television viewers will be able to see the first of a series of top class late night features from the Allied Artists Library.

This first production in the series features Jane Frazee, Kirby Grant and Charles Smith in a light, bright and cheerful musical called "Rhythm Inn".

Sunday Showtime continues with its weekly presentation of outstanding Rank successes and tomorrow night viewers can see "Value for Money" with a host of famous stars headed by John Gregson, Diana Dors, Susan Stephen and Derek Farr.
"Value for Money" is a light-hearted review of the life of tight-fisted, woman-shy Charley Broadbent who has only one passion—football. Two women enter his dull life and strange things—including a double suicide for breach of promise—happen. The solution makes excellent television.

At five minutes past eight tomorrow night Hongkong viewers can enjoy the first presentation of the great C.B.S. production "Assignment Foreign Legion".
This show, which stars Merle Oberon, has enjoyed tremendous popularity during its current run in America and it is anticipated that it will be equally well received here.

JAK

and GEORGE (Yes, Whitting)with this week's guest SHAMUS

London:
BACK in 1614, a chap called Camden came up with the cute observation that you cannot teach an old dog new tricks.

That observation has now been put out of date by another chap called Bill Delstanché, and if you do not believe it you should get out at Hammersmith and walk down Fulham Palace Road.

Take Fido with you, ask for St Clement's Hall, pay a shilling, and you're in. Any Thursday evening.

It was Shamus, eldest son of a nobleman named Stinburndorf Frohlich von Dom and a lady named Nellie, who led me to Mr Delstanché, though I admit that Jak is entitled to some of the credit—which is a commodity all cartoonists live very well on.

For a small sum

It all began when Jak, using exactly the same tone of voice as that employed in business hours by promoter Jack Solomons, mentioned that he had discovered a boxer who could lick any other boxer in the world.

For a small cash sum, he added, I could purchase a percentage of this redoubtable athlete.

Now, normally, the only bargains on offer on the pugilistic market are slightly ringed specimens known in the trade as bums, has-beens and layabouts.

But I once knew a man who missed 10 per cent of Rocky Marciano for the price of a few hamburgers.

"Tell me more," I said.

"This boxer of mine," said Jak, "is the greatest of all time, and his name is to go. Never been beaten. Doesn't know the meaning of the word 'fear'—or any other word, if it comes to that."

A monochrome?

A familiar spiel. I asked for a more specific account of the champ's potential. "His real name is Feleiga," said Jak. "He's a German aristocrat, but we call him Shamus so his relations won't find out."

An unbeaten German heavyweight with an Irish name! Maybe we had something here. "Does he wear a monocle?" I asked.

"Not yet," replied Jak. "But he can swim like a duck, retrieve, defend me against an aggressor fetch the milk, carry a shopping basket, count up to sixpence, read a newspaper and change the baby."

So Shamus was a dog. A boxer dog, admittedly. Possibly the greatest boxer dog of all time, but a dog nevertheless.

In the circumstances, there was not much I could do but call Jak a liar and accuse him of gross exaggeration re the animal's achievements.

And that was how we came to meet Mr Delstanché and the Fulham and District Dog Training Club in St Clement's Hall.

You can't make a big-headed boxer lie down

Here, said Jak, he would have Shamus show me his paces. He did so. And the Fulham and District Dog Training Club are not likely to forget it in a hurry.

Shamus, who is red in colour and weighs nearly 80lbs, has an "L"-shaped white blaze on the snout of his neck. I now know why. Nature sure knew Shamus when she slushed out the markings.

It was possibly a little unfortunate that the secretary, Mr Alf Plumley, happened to be the owner of Brutus, who turned out to be an even larger boxer than Shamus.

The introductions, I felt, were unnecessarily bolstered and informal, possibly occasioned by the fact that Shamus arrived just when Brutus was gossiping amiably in the doorway with a lady dog named Hay—or maybe it was Betsy.

You know how it is when your host introduces you and you don't quite catch the name.

Some of those bitches do chatter so.

Anyway Shamus decided to be the life and soul of the party rather too early, and Brutus, very rightly, in my opinion, took a little umbrage. Even boxers have their feelings. There the matter might have ended had not Jak upped and issued a sharp word of command—an immediate signal for Shamus to start wrecking the joint and to use language St Clement would never have understood. Mr Plumley said not to worry, but immediately sent three members to guard the grand piano.

Fortunately, Mr Delstanché, the head trainer arrived in time to save the Fulham and District Dog Training Club winding up its affairs on the spot.

And I would like to state right now that Mr Delstanché, who was born in Belgium and sells Comptometers, is an absolute wow, not to mention a wonder and a wizard, with any kind, breed, variety or specimen of dog you care to mention.

Lazy dogs

Looking straight at Jak, Mr Delstanché announced that lazy owners meant lazy dogs, and that nobody should blame his dog if he couldn't get the best out of his dog. He should blame himself. And Mr Delstanché looked at Jak some more.

But fair's fair, Shamus behaved in an exemplary manner when Jak led him out on the training parade. He walked, he stopped, he sat, and he came to heel.

Even the experts liked the way Shamus did his stuff. Mrs Julia Sayer's crossbred Labrador called Tim, Mrs Barbara Spry's pug named Percy, Mr K. Clifton-Jones's doberman named Volk, and Miss Winifred Lawrence's red and white basenji bitch, known far and wide as Periwinkle of the Congo, all barked their approval.

Correction: Periwinkle did not bark. Bwonjis never bark. They yodel.

Unfortunately, all this hero-worship went to Shamus's head, and the climax arrived when

Mr Delstanché's clients came to that part of their training where they are supposed to lie down.

Shamus, being a boxer, was plainly of the opinion that the only time to lie down is when you are being paid to lie down.

"Flat!" commanded Jak.

Shamus stayed upright. Whereupon a charming lady in charge of an adjacent Alsatian offered some timely advice from the corner.

"Knock his front legs from under him," she whispered.

Well-meant and a kindly piece of dog-logic, I feel sure. Unfortunately, Shamus misinterpreted Jak's shove under the fore-paws. If the old man wants to play games, thought Shamus, let's play games.

In five seconds flat, the training session suspended itself. Jak and Shamus were in a tangled heap, on St Clement's floor; I was back in the light-reporting business; pugs, poodles and poches set up a canine equivalent of the noise they make at Shoreditch Town Hall ringside.

Even Mr Delstanché, who has taught and trained hundreds of dogs, said there had to be exceptions to the rule. He also mentioned that Jak need not pay his shilling just leave them in peace, that's all he asked.

But I'll say this for Shamus. He best Jak fair and square, and Jak, who once won a brown belt, has asked me not to mention the affair at his judo club. (London Express Service).

Nagging pain—or is it just all in your mind?

ARE you always complaining of pains? If you are Professor E. Stengel, of Sheffield University, suggests you may need a psychiatrist and not a doctor.

"The tendency of so many doctors to regard every patient who complains about pain as suffering from organic disease is often doing a great deal of harm," says the professor in The Medical Press.

Nervous trouble

"The fact is that a large proportion, probably the majority of neurotic patients and many psychotics, complain about pain."

Professor Stengel's subject is psychiatry.

He offers several clues to the nature of neurotic pain.

Most important is the absence of other symptoms, such as tissue damage, and the presence of neurotic symptoms, such as excessive anxiety. Neurotic pain, too, he says, often tends to shift from one part of the body to another.

Can't be killed

The head, the heart region and the abdomen, are particularly liable to neurotic pain. Experiments have shown that analgesics (pain killers) have no marked effect on neurotic pain, the professor adds.

A more dangerous patient is one who has an inextinguishable desire for painful surgical operations.

"The Americans use the term 'poly-surgery' for this abnormal predilection which has been regarded as due to unconscious self-destructive tendencies," says the professor. (London Express Service).

JET 'GUN' TO CUT OUT THE PAIN IN JABS

A JET "gun," which injects anaesthetics or drugs PAINLESSLY into a patient, is being developed at the Eastman Dental Hospital, London. The "gun," which fires the drug in a fine stream, at high pressure, through the skin, may replace the hypodermic needle, painful and frightening to some patients.

A prototype has been built by Dr Richard Stephens, senior lecturer in children's dentistry. Although it is being developed primarily for dental anaesthetics, it may prove to have very wide applications in medicine. Dr Stephens said: "I am particularly interested in it for children, who are sometimes frightened or put off by a needle. A patient should feel virtually nothing—perhaps a slight stinging—whereas a needle in the mouth is most unpleasant."

Work on a similar injector is going on in America.

The technique was investigated when doctors noticed all under the skin of engineers working on diesel fuel injectors. It was found that the oil was driven quite deep under the skin without any pain.

The prototype works on a spring system, like an air pistol. Anaesthetic or drug is placed in a cartridge attached to the barrel.

Dr Stephens said: "Using a spring, there is some recoil. I am anxious to contact experts to help design a neat hydraulic system, which would overcome this and enable us to have one no bigger than a fountain pen."

"The Western campaign to reduce fats in the diet is a capitalist plot. It is advantageous to the ruling classes, who at present are engaged in lowering the living standards of the masses, in lowering their wages and in raising the price of food—particularly fat. The masses in capitalist countries suffer from a shortage, not an excess of fat."

THE SIX RICHEST MEN IN BRITAIN

Turning the spotlight on a man in the shadows

The giant is so shy

SIR JOHN PILES UP MILLIONS IN SECRET

• Richest of all Britain's rich men is least in the public eye. He controls his vast shipping and financial interests with such anonymity that some of his executives have never met him.

IT is safe enough to say that you would not spot Britain's richest man in a crowd—for he would never willingly appear in a crowd.

Even if you were one of the thousands working to increase his immense fortune the chances are you would never have set eyes on him. Even if you were one of his top executives you might never have spoken to him.

In the past quarter of a century only two photographs of him have been published. His only public utterance in that period were the words, "I have no statement to make."

A recluse

You will not find his private address in any reference book nor his phone number in any directory. You would not come across him at a West End party, at a first night, at a race meeting—or indeed at any spot where rich men customarily congregate.

For Sir John Reeves Ellerman, master of a fortune which must exceed £500,000,000 and could approach £1,000,000,000, is a recluse. He has built an almost impenetrable wall of secrecy around himself.

To understand why this is so, one needs to consider the character of his father, the founder of the Ellerman millions, the man who was said to collect nothing but money. Old Sir John, son of a German consular official at Hull, started his business career as a teenage clerk in an accountant's office. He was a genius at figures, with an immense capacity for work.

He did so well in the firm that the day came when he felt himself in a position to ask for a partnership. His request was refused. So Ellerman put on his hat and walked out.

He set up as an accountant on his own. And occasionally he would buy up an ailing business, put it on his feet—and then resell it at a profit.

His flair

Though he had little technical knowledge of ships, he had a particular flair for shipping companies. Over the years the house flags of such famous lines as H.M.S. City, P&O, Cunard, Buckle, and Wilson came under his control—all of them today members of the Ellerman group.

SIR JOHN ELLERMAN... this picture, taken in 1953, was the first to appear for 20 years. There has been none since.

he constantly drummed his strange ideas about the importance of saving money; of resisting the least extravagance, and above all, of avoiding publicity. He was once asked why he had not sent his boy to Eton. "I was fearful," he replied, "lest other boys might borrow money from my defenceless and inexperienced son and lead him into bad habits."

No interest

So young John went to Malvern instead. But he was soon taken away—his father is said to have feared he might be kidnapped—and put in the hands of private tutors.

The boy—tall, thin, and extremely shy—showed no interest in any kind of sport. His only hobby was acting in plays which he wrote and produced himself within the family circle.

In 1933 his father died. The popular view that this hard old man of 71 was by far the richest in Britain proved abundantly justified. He left nearly twice as much as any Briton before him—£260,804,894. With property owned abroad his total fortune was about £40,000,000.

Death duties took £18,000,000. The new Sir John Ellerman—then 23—inherited most of what was left.

But the inheritance did not end there. Sir John was soon to show that he had acquired all his father's passion for secrecy, his dislike for any intrusion into his affairs.

Five weeks after his father's death he married dark-haired, good-looking Esther Leopolda de Sola, one of his few childhood friends. There was no formal engagement, no announcement of the wedding, no reception.

The few guests were taken by car to Sir John's house, where they learned that the wedding was to be at Chertsey (Surrey) register office.

For the bride of Britain's richest man there was no suite in a luxury hotel, no yacht, no villa on the Riviera. The honeymoon was spent in a cottage at Eastbourne where Sir John had once had piano lessons. It stood in an undistinguished street, hemmed in by working-class houses.

Later the couple moved to an unpretentious house near Sunningdale. The grounds were surrounded by a seven-foot wall, topped by broken glass. It was no use asking there for Sir John Ellerman. Callers were told that the occupant of the house was "Mr Fountain."

Application

For a time Sir John worked in the Ellerman offices in the City. But his visits grew fewer. He was more often to be found in the basement of the Natural History Museum, studying the bones of rats, mice, and other rodents.

The intense application which old Sir John had devoted to building his shipping empire was showing itself in the son's concentration on natural history.

Through the British Museum (Natural History) he published the result of his research in "The Families and Genera of Living Rodents"—the first two volumes of which ran to 1,388 pages.

Sir John helped also to produce "A Checklist of Palaearctic and Indian Mammals." His wife, a gifted artist, provided the illustrations. While Ellerman spent his days in study and his evenings in such gentle relaxations as table tennis, bagatelle, and piano playing, what has been happening to his fortune?

Impregnable

Under the skilled guidance of expert advisers it has been piling up. Look at some of the things he owns.

The king-pin of his fortune is Ellerman Lines, which operates about 90 ocean-going liners, totalling more than 600,000 tons.

The cost of replacing these ships—almost entirely owned by the quiet student of mice—has been given as £100 million. Because Ellerman spends so little on himself and needs so little in the way of dividends, the company has built up an impenetrably strong position—with reserves of £43,000,000.

But his wide-ranging investments extend far beyond shipping. He has substantial interests in real estate, in newspapers (notably in the Daily Mirror and Sunday Pictorial), and in other industrial securities.

They are centred in a string of trusts founded by his father—among them the Ellerman Property Trust, Audley Trust, London General Investment Trust, and the Mortgage Trust. All these are fine, prosperous companies, with assets running into many millions. London General, for example, was paying a 10 per cent dividend in 1959. Its latest dividend is 20 per cent. Investments appearing in the balance sheet at £1,500,000 are worth twice that.

Permanent

In the Directory of Directors Sir John is shown only as a director of Ellerman Lines. But he is also the "permanent director" of Audley Trust.

New articles adopted by that company provide that any director who absents himself from board meetings for six months can be required to vacate office. But the "permanent director" is specifically excluded from that provision—which suggests that Ellerman is increasingly content to keep away from the centre of his business empire and leave the money-making to others.

To their intense regret Sir John and Lady Ellerman have no children. There is no heir. So, although Sir John himself may be the greatest enigma among the rich men of Britain, an even bigger question mark hangs over his millions.

What, in the fulness of time, is to happen to the biggest fortune ever accumulated in the country? —(London Express Service).

British nurses run hospital in desert land

Sidi Bettache, Morocco.

LACKING everything, except a roof, two British nurses are helping more than 1,000 patients per month in an area of Morocco 34 miles from the nearest doctor or ambulance. Their treatment is free and the surgery and the two-bed maternity section are never empty.

The only help is from the wives of American officers and diplomats. Nurse Winifred Millward, of Luton, has been here since 1939. Physiotherapist Dora Rapson, of St Albans, has been here eight years. She is the strong hand in the surgery.

Missionaries

Both girls are also missionaries and they preach the New Testament by telling the natives simple Bible stories.

The mission was started in 1929 by the Rev Cecil Hyde-Hill, who was vicar of Christchurch, St Albans, before he was appointed archdeacon of Morocco. After his death his wife came to live here and she built a house in his memory.

The girls once had a car loaned them by a missionary on home leave. But now they walk, ride a donkey or, when it is available, an all-iron springless and noisy trap drawn by a thin horse—whose bones rattle each time he moves.

Their house has no electricity, no telephone and a letter takes five days to reach Rabat, 38 miles away.

When they feel lonely the girls hold a two-person Sunday service. —(London Express Service).

Men may settle in Polar regions, they say

DEVELOPMENT of the North and South Polar regions has taken on a much greater significance since the advent of atomic power, the discovery of great mineral deposits at the North Pole, and increasing warnings from the United Nations that the world is slowly becoming over-populated.

Two reports on taming the polar regions and perhaps eventually populating them are now being studied by the Arctic Institute of North America which has its headquarters in Montreal.

The first was by Dr Paul A. Siple, scientific leader of the American South Pole base during the International Geophysical Year.

'Commonplace'

He said that settling in the Antarctic may become almost commonplace within the next generation.

"Certainly within 10 years there are apt to be colonies in the Antarctic. At that time they will probably be the families of men maintaining weather stations there." —(London Express Service).

The "Light as Air" Look

According to the London collections the relaxed but never casual look is still with us. Fabrics call the fashion tune and give us a "light as air" look for summer.

by PATRICIA DOUGLAS

THE top London fashion designers are united in their presentation of an easy-to-wear, relaxed look which is never casual, but on the contrary is always matched and elegant. Fabrics called the fashion tune at the spring/summer collections, with their cheerful colours and individuality. Most of them are so featherweight as to present a "light as air" look for summer.

In general, jackets and coats offer the greatest difference. Jackets are mostly longer, often long waisted and either fit easily round the waist or are "dropped" with low placed pockets, belts and other treatments.

Coats, on the other hand, vary by being  $\frac{1}{2}$  or  $\frac{3}{4}$  in length and partner skirts, suits or dresses in matching or companion clothes. Almost every jacket, dress and coat is collarless, and the button-through look is one which should give joy to every button manufacturer.

Dresses stay slim and are usually bloused at the waistline. In some houses they have either a pleated skirt, or a skirt with softeners either side, created by darts or unpressed pleats.

Colours begin with the basics—black, navy, lots of grey and white. Lilac, pale blue and pale green—often mixed with white—form the main colour scheme. Incidentally one textile expert predicts that by autumn we shall be wearing deep blue and a much greater.

Textiles are extremely lightweight and chock-full of interest. Wool tweeds have taken a new turn. They are checked, and are an inspiration of young Scottish designers who are taking a great interest in designing materials. One such Scottish tweed used by VICTOR STEBEL makes up into a dress weighing about 1½ lbs. HARDY AMIES, another Royal dressmaker, features gossamer tweeds (delightful for air travel), and says that an all-wool dress and jacket can now weigh less than the lead weights used in the hem of a coat. LACHASSE uses a white wool mesh for a coat with semi-fitted front, and an oval back with a panel of unpressed pleats either side. Wool is now a SUMMER fabric as much as it is a winter one.

Within this general framework, every couturier works individually, and you can follow some of their ideas, even if you cannot buy their clothes. CAVANAGH is another young designer upon whom

British fashion hopes must depend. His clothes are youthful, elegant and have the matched-up look of true couture. His simplicity bears the hallmark of Molyneux. Here, jackets are slightly shorter, so, too, are skirts. He shows jackets slightly indented in front and straighter and longer at the back. Sleeves, as elsewhere, are never full length. Skirts are mostly slim but swell out for evening occasions.

Topcoats are starkly simple but extremely smart, and are often buttoned-through. Bolero backs—a general feature—are irrefragable here as well, and we chose for illustration a navy wool  $\frac{3}{4}$  coat, with an impeccably smart navy wool dress with bolero back and elegant white plique trimming.

Blousing at Cavanagh is often extended to the hipline, where a short slim skirt, giving something of a "maternity" fashion air. One such dress is in the new shade of "grey" wool. Another bloused top dress is in wool shaded from palest beige to brown. Hats here are amusing but very smart. Some are sombrero type with wide brims, while others are helmet type like the old Robert Peel policeman!

OWEN HYDE-CLARKE of WORTH, who recently made news with Lady Pamela Mountbatten's wedding dress, is a specialist in clothes for the grand occasion. His clients have such events. Nevertheless, he shows beautiful tailored suits, and dress and jacket trims which could be useful to every woman.

My own pick of the bunch is what Worth (with over a hundred years of tradition) calls a coat and skirt. There are others call it a suit. Here, a suit in mauve and grey check wool gives a zephyr-like effect. The short, broad revers are edged with the fabric used on the bias, and a bias strip, which is buttoned, runs down the length of the jacket and skirt.

Three Royal designers offer truly Royal suggestions of what you should wear. Fabulous NORMAN HARTNELL has a large collection with a lot of everything which is beautifully done. His suits have jackets which are mostly cut to hipbone length, and he features them in variety of colour—full tweeds and hopsacks. Many suits have longer jackets, of  $\frac{1}{2}$  length, and there are dress and jacket or dress and full-length coat teams. My choice is a clover pink linen weave wool suit with a long jacket, a long coat and dress of grey done with darker broad stripes, and a very fine navy wool dress with fine pleated bodice and slightly wider pleats in the skirt.

For evening wear, Mr. Hartnell produces time and again fantastic beaded and embroidered cocktail and full-length gowns both with slim and crin-line or bell-shaped skirts with the stamp of a truly regal collection.

The same can be said of Mr. Stikbell's collection. Here, longer, looser blazer-type jackets swing over slim skirts and they are curved inwards under the bust in front. Rose pink, lilac and white, lime yellow—these are the flower colour he favours. Little ties are used at necklines and waists, inset belts are repeated with neckline strapings, and skirts again have "soft" semi-pleated tops. Typical is a suit in pink wool tweed with a jacket buttoning through—save for one button where a tiny tie takes its place. Over this goes a companion cloth  $\frac{3}{4}$  length coat with a double cuff effect achieved by a fold. Flower colours and flower prints are used for evening skirts and evening tops. These are both short and long with delicate shades of green-grey, soft pink, greyish mauve and soft blues all intermingled.

HARDY AMIES, another Royal dressmaker, and present chairman of the Incorporated Society of London Fashion Designers, uses the theme of slattery. Who would want to resist him! His suits have fitted fronts and loose backs and, of course, bracelet-length sleeves. He has lowered the waist and he uses airy dry tweeds and other fine cloths. "Travel clothes weigh nothing," says Mr. Amies. Having some of the smartest clients in the world, he should know!

CHARLES CREED, with generations of tailoring ancestry, shows redingotes,  $\frac{3}{4}$  coats and suits as the backbone of his collection. The longer waisted look is most emphasised here with a lowered waistline, and a very easy fit at the waist.

Mr. Creed uses wind-up-trims of leather, kid, hair and plique. His new make is the looped bow which appears at the back of blouses peeping over jacket necklines. Scarves are styled, through either side of high cut skirts. Dresses here emphasise the come-back of the pleated skirt.

The British collections show some truly fabulous fabrics... some first class workmanship... and only here and there a truly original theme. These are timeless clothes which British women love and which even the most wealthy of women expects to wear for a number of years. Whether or not they will make fashion history is open to doubt, but for those of us who like to look quietly elegant, there is much to see for inspiration.

Here's a prediction for autumn: can be seen in a semi-fitted navy wool coat over a blue and green check dress with a pleated skirt diagonally cut to one side, rising to the waistline.

LEFT TO RIGHT: 1. Hardy Amies calls this "Outside Left". It is a smart pink wool hopsack tweed topcoat with large outside pocket and is worn over (2) a jumper suit-type dress in the current fashion fabric craze—grey West of England wool flannel. 3. Creed calls this model "Sahara" and describes the coat as a "travel-length cardigan". Sand wool suiting is used for the long jacket and skirt with rolled edges, outlined by saddle stitching which gives a tunic effect. 4. From Worth is "Zephyr"—an interesting suit described as a "coat and skirt". The check fabric is cleverly used for bias edgings on the revers and a buttoned strip down the jacket and skirt for a new, button-through effect. 5. John Cavanagh's superbly smart dress in finest navy wool with white plique trimmings is the second half of a team. There is an elegant 7/8 coat to match, giving a tunic look. The dress has the new long bolero back. 6. The Cavanagh suit look is worth following. This version in yellow and beige checked tweed has a faraway neckline, and inset belt with soft tucking above and below. The skirt is short and slim.

A story of unmatched accuracy—backed by official figures!

In 1928 Rolex manufactured a total of 64,596 fine men's watches, and 33,256 which were submitted to the Swiss Institutes for Official Time-keeping Tests, were awarded an Official Chronometer Certificate.

This means that 51 per cent of all the men's watches made by Rolex in 1928

Wear the coveted title of "Officially Certified Chronometer." All these Rolex chronometers passed the stringent tests, in five different positions, at extreme temperatures, during 15 days and nights.

A far greater proportion of watches made by Rolex achieved this high distinction than those of any other watch manufacturer. Thus the Rolex policy of manufacturing only watches of the utmost precision and quality is indicated by this record, and by the facts shown in the panel on the right.

ROLEX

Beware of counterfeits—buy only from authorized dealers.

Rolex made 81 per cent of all ladies' Officially Certified Chronometers!

In 1928, 1,240 official Chronometer Certificates were issued for ladies' watches by Swiss Institutes for Official Time-keeping Tests. Rolex made 1,021 of these watches—81 per cent of the total!

Only the highest craftsmanship and skill can bring such extraordinary accuracy, even to the small movement of a lady's watch.

Since 1927 Rolex have made 54% of all Officially Certified Chronometers

During the 32 years from 1927 to 1959, Rolex made 322,710 Swiss Officially Certified Chronometers. The rest of the entire watch industry produced 222,270. In other words, Rolex produced 59 per cent of all the Officially Certified Chronometers made during that time—that is, well over half the total Swiss production!

JACKY'S DIARY

BY JACKY MENDELSON
Age 32½

One of the New Kids turned out to be a girl after he took off his Snow-Suit.

Our old Teacher must of got promoted cause we got a brand new one. Her name is Miss Arthur, which is a Man's name. But anyhow she's a Lady.

I wish I had got the job of Waist-Basket Emptier in stead but, then you can get the Chooing Gum the Teacher makes the other kids throw out.

She gave me a seat up front on a count of I'm kinda short for my height.

P.S. Also she gave us some Arithmetic Home-Work to bring in on Monday, which is this:

If a man can chop down 3 trees in a hour, how much hours would it take him to chop down twenty four trees?

So I gotta go out in the park & start in chopping before it gets dark.

IS THIS THE END OF THE LATIN LOVER?

THREE of us sat in a darkened studio in Rome watching the screen. A girl was doing a strip-tease to the "I-want-to-be-happy" Cha-cha.

Two young men dressed in frilly skirts and feather head-dresses were attempting the "Can-Can."

This was the much talked-of "orgy" sequence in Federico ("La Strada"), Fellini's sensational film of Roman life, "La Dolce Vita."

The lights went up. Mr Fellini went off to discuss the dubbing, so I turned to his assistant, Giuliano Guidi.

"That should raise a few Roman roofs when it comes out," said I.

Guidi raised his eyes and clasped his hands in an attitude of mock prayer.

"We all have our passports ready for the opening early in February! I tell you I don't think anyone anywhere has ever dared to make a film like this—it's a pity we are still dubbing and you can't see the whole thing."

Frustrating

Another gay gathering began taking shape on the screen—but this time the party was given by one of the nobility in a castle outside the city.

Nothing too improper was happening—except for one American lady who persistently asked various gentlemen to accompany her upstairs. The reel cracked to a close.

ANITA EKBERG IN THE FILM I SAW.

"Whose castle?" I asked.

"It's obviously not a set!"

"Oh, we rented that from the Prince Odescalchi," replied Guidi.

"There are at least half a dozen castles near Rome used by the studios for a million lire or so a week. We had quite a few of the aristocracy acting in that scene too—mostly counts and dukes, but there were a couple of princes, though not famous ones."

"Why did they do it?" I asked Fellini. "They must have known you were making fun of the aristocracy?"

"For laughs or for the money," he replied. "Now they can no longer fight crusades some have nothing else to do but live a masochistic sort of life which, to me, seems dictated by uncertainty of their true position in the world of today."

As I drove away from Cine Citta I thought of what Fellini had said.

It must, indeed, be painfully frustrating to find yourself an

by Patricia Lewis

anachronism at 30. And not only you... but your way of life and your attitude to it.

This, I believe, is what is happening to some of the younger generation of Italian princes.

The sudden realization of their own uselessness—except to propagate the family names (and even this small exercise is quite beyond some)—brings with it a desperation to become part of the throbbing, dangerous, vital real world that exists outside the confines of palace walls, traditional behaviour and arranged marriages.

So some take up with the movie-set; some take up wearing jeans; some take up mistresses (the ladies of Italian nobility are no match for the looks of the low-born); and some take up dope.

They become the playboy princes.

I'm afraid I find them a sad, rather than a splendid spectacle.

'Il Principe'

The other night I dined with the petite blonde young painter Novella Farigini in the bawdy "Inverna" where the Bohemians currently gather.

Suddenly the chatter and the laughter stopped. "Il Principe," went the whisper. And even he watched as Filippo Ordini, recent escort of Belinda Lee, guided an elegant group of eight to a nearby table, among them his regular "date," French film actress Irene Tunc.

It must, indeed, be painfully frustrating to find yourself an

I asked Novella what she thought of the playboy princes in general. She gave a hollow chuckle. "Nothing," she said in French. "Too many of them are parasites."

Most of the Italian titles were given by one or other of the Popes over the centuries and the 360-odd holders are known as the Black Aristocracy. The more middle-aged of the papal princes lead exemplary lives.

But occasionally the Black Aristocracy produces a black sheep.

Filippo Ordini is one of the blackest "Blacks": his family is one of the three most ancient and important in Papal society. What is his position today?

By birth he is assistant at the Pontifical Throne—an honour held by his family for over 800 years. But his romance with Belinda Lee lost him this privilege.

Banned by the Vatican separated from his wife, Princess Franca, and confronted with various lawsuits, Don Filippo is in a mess of trouble.

Meanwhile he lives pleasantly enough—though modestly for an Italian prince. He has moved into a small service flat; he plays a little tennis; he eats well as the guest of café society.

Sharing Filippo's name (and reputation with the ladies) is his tall, young, almost-unbearably handsome cousin Raimondo, whose rumoured engagement to ex-Queen Soraya looks more and more unlikely.

Raimondo has often been called the most eligible bachelor in Rome. He inherited his title and his looks from his father.

Scandal

But there is one blot of scandal on the escutcheon. A French model girl, Monique Bertousselle, recently launched a paternity suit against him. He is, of course, defending.

It's not only lack of money that prevents the two Ordinis from living in the medieval splendour you'd attribute to their title—it's the style adopted by more modern-minded princes.

It looks as if time and—in some cases—money is running out for Rome's playboy princes.

SIBERIA AWAITS DEMOBLED MEN

WHAT happens now to the hundreds of thousands of Russian soldiers about to be demobilised?

Siberia and the virgin lands are waiting—wide open and man hungry.

Colonel-General Filipp Golikov, head of the army's political administration, significantly pointed out to the Supreme Soviet today that the last time the army was cut, 130,000 soldiers went to work in the virgin lands.

The soldiers who are going to be released will also be asked to volunteer for Siberia.

Meetings will be called—probably by General Golikov's department—and the virtues of working in the virgin lands will be explained.

Their courage and their duty will be invoked. And the privileges and wages attached to working in the forests and deserts will be detailed.

I predict they will volunteer in their thousands to go to Siberia and the vast cornfields of Kazakhstan.

All this will be a tremendous boon to Russia's economy. Siberia is waiting in wealth, waiting for men to come and take it—oil, gold, coal, steel, diamonds. You name it, it's there.

Canada builds nuclear HQ underground

OTTAWA. THE Canadian government is building a series of nuclear bomb-proof shelters around the capital in which key people and services could continue to operate indefinitely.

Details of one shelter have been revealed by the Minister of Defence, Mr George Pearkes. It is 15 miles west of Ottawa, 100 feet deep, 200 feet long and 180 feet wide, and is designed to house a self-contained communications centre.

"It is being built and will be equipped so that the personnel maintaining and operating it may remain underground almost indefinitely or at least for a good, long time," Mr Pearkes said.

Work has begun on a second communications bunker 30 miles south-west of the capital.

CHRIS DOBSON

FORECASTS THEIR DESTINY

The economic future of the Soviet Union lies beyond the Urals. Hydro-electric power is there in abundance. Great dams are being built.

Industrial complexes as large as the Ruhr are being carved out of the forest. Cities where scientists will live and work in modern laboratories are arising among the pines thousands of miles from Moscow.

But this is still not enough. Siberia needs more men, more machines, and more money to tap its vast wealth.

And now, Khrushchev has made them all available in one superb stroke:

In all 1,200,000 men to be demobilised over the next two years. All their lorries and field kitchens and bulldozers released. And millions of roubles freed for civilian spending.

HOTEL DETECTIVES LEARN TO SAMBA

America's leading hotels are employing a new breed of house detective these days.

He is suave, elegant, trained to samba as well as shoot.

These detectives are frequently graduates of "charm schools" for policemen, and are closer to television's idealised "private eyes" than to the old movie version of the dumb "flatfoot" who prowled around hotel lobbies.

'Ashamed'

"Once a man was ashamed to say he was a house detective," said Mr Robert Brasen, president of the Society of Hotel Detectives.

"He was regarded as the worst kind of snooper, a furtive fellow who would peep at the guest from a vantage point behind the potted palms."

"Not any more. Such is his appearance and function today that he is frequently mistaken for a guest in one of the royal suites."

The hotels are credited with transforming their detectives from "a down-at-the-heel type with a cheap cigar in his mouth" to the present polished character because they realised that the old-fashioned type was easily spotted by the kind of people who most needed watching.

FOOTNOTE—A New York hotel assigned its detective to investigate a woman guest who was suspected of trying to sell worthless stocks to elderly male guests. He learned that she loved to samba.

"...by dancing with her continuously, and asking the right kind of questions, he finally helped to wait her off to jail," said the report on this card.

SINO-BURMESE TREATY

General Ne Win, Chou reach accord in Peking

Peking, Jan. 29. The Burmese Premier General Ne Win has concluded an important boundary agreement and non-aggression treaty with China during a four-day stay.

A joint communique announced the conclusion of both documents following "free and frank discussions" between General Ne Win and Mr Chou En-lai and other Chinese leaders.

Details of the agreement and treaty were withheld until General Ne Win's return to Rangoon, expected tomorrow.

The communique said the Premier agreed that the documents would be a "lasting monument to the growing friendship and mutual understanding between the new China and the new Burma."

DIPLOMATIC

Observers here considered that extensive diplomatic exchanges probably prepared the way in advance of General Ne Win's brief visit for the conclusion of the treaty and agreement.

Disputed border areas between China and Burma have been the subject of discussions, correspondence and meetings between the countries' statesmen since 1954 without any final agreement being reached till now.

Mr Chou En-lai may now feel the Sino-Burmese boundary agreement has strengthened his hand in pressing for an early meeting with Mr Nehru to discuss the Sino-Indian frontier dispute.—Reuter.

Famed British World War II admiral dies

Portsmouth, Jan. 28. The Admiral of the Fleet, Sir Arthur John Power, one of Britain's leading naval commanders in World War II, died at the Royal Naval Hospital today aged 70.

Admiral Power—popularly known in the Navy as "Arthur John"—earned fame early in World War II as commander of the original Ark Royal, Britain's first large aircraft carrier.

In her he hunted down the German pocket battleship Graf Spee which was eventually scuttled in the River Plate. South America and although reportedly claimed "sunk" by Nazi propaganda helped destroy the German raider Blumark.—Reuter.

To help Egypt build her High Dam at Aswan, Russia has sent money (at 2½%) and technicians. And, potentially more disruptively, technicians' wives who have discovered that the Nile banks make an effective substitute for the Black Sea beaches. But at least here is one determined Moslem who doesn't intend to have his meditation disturbed by unworthy thoughts.—Express Photo.

13 Conservative MPs stage minor revolt

London, Jan. 28. Thirteen Conservative MPs staged a minor revolt against the Government last night, urging a more dynamic policy for the state-owned coal industry.

The rebels included Mr Gerald Nabarro, Lord Hinchinbrooke and Mr Nigel Birch, a former economic secretary to the Treasury.

They put forward an amendment to a Government bill authorising the National Coal Board, which runs the industry, to borrow another £50 million because it is unable to sell its rising stocks of coal.

The rebels were against the continued piling up of stocks which have increased in the past 12 months from 17 million to 36 million tons.

DEFEATED

The amendment sought to cut the amount to be borrowed by half, but it was defeated by 179 votes to 11—a Government majority of 168.

In addition to the eleven who voted against the Government there were two "tellers," those who count the votes but do not vote themselves.

Mr Richard Wood, Minister of Power, said the Coal Board's loss in 1959 was likely to amount to £29 million, but he denied the Board would lose another £50 million this year as suggested by Mr Nabarro.—Reuter.

London market uncertain

London, Jan. 28. Uncertain conditions prevailed in London Stock Markets today. Buyers tended to hold off and some small selling was evident.

There was still a certain amount of selective buying in progress but small losses predominated in most sections at the close.

Dulness was persistent in gilt-edged securities for most of the day but rallied towards the end of the session.

Industrials moved erratically and after easing during the initial stages there was a mild recovery but this failed to develop on any scale and losses were in the majority at the close.

Yesterday the stock markets developed a firmer tendency during the early part of the session but buying interest appeared to slacken later and many industrial equities reacted to some profit-taking.—Reuter.

Wall Street closes with some gains

New York, Jan. 28. Stocks staged an irregular advance during the first hour today in moderate trading.

Prices moved narrowly on either side of the previous close. Brokers said the failure of many stocks to respond to good news indicates that technical considerations rather than current business conditions were uppermost in the minds of many market followers.

Steels favoured a lower trend in line with a statement by Mr. Royer M. Elough, U.S. Steel chairman, that steel output would dip after a good first half.

Motors were easier, with trader sentiment depressed by car output and sales figures indicating that the pace was about half of what had been predicted.

Motorola and Zenith gained a point each in the electronics where Texas Instruments firmed and Ampex Inc. lost a point. Du Pont was up around one in the chemicals. Drugs were firm. Today's volume was 2,630,000 shares.—UPI.

Ike: U.S. is strongest

Los Angeles, Jan. 27. President Eisenhower said tonight that under his leadership the United States is the strongest power on earth, militarily and economically.

The President was opening the Republican campaign for the November Presidential Election by addressing a fund-raising dinner here.—Reuter.

TUC takes action against S. Africa

London, Jan. 28. Britain's Trades Union Congress yesterday called on its 8 million members to boycott South African goods during March as a protest against South Africa's racial segregation policies.

A statement issued by the organisation's general council called on union members "to show their personal disgust... at the colour treatment of coloured persons in South Africa."

The Council made clear that the protest would be limited to a personal boycott by consumers. South African produce and British exports to South Africa would be handled normally at docks and other work places.—AP.

UK industrial stoppages

London, Jan. 28. Industrial stoppages throughout Britain last year involved about 644,000 workers and caused a loss of 8,250,000 working days, according to figures issued here today.

The Ministry of Labour Gazette reported that there were 2,085 stoppages last year compared with 2,039 involving 824,000 workers in 1958. But the number of working days lost in 1959 totalled 2,462,000.—Reuter.

Bank manager to face trial

London, Jan. 28. Gert Waller, 47-year-old Dutch bank manager, today was ordered held for trial on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Netherlands Bank of South Africa of £100,000.

Arthur Humphreys Hutton, 51-year-old British accountant, accused jointly with Waller, was freed on £10,000 bail.—AP.

Messages, photos via the moon

Washington, Jan. 28. The U.S. Navy today sent messages and a photograph from here to Hawaii by way of the moon—a journey of nearly 500,000 miles—in three seconds.

It demonstrated this process, using the moon as a relay station, and bouncing radio signals off it, for the first time in public at a navy radio station at Cheltenham, Maryland. It said it had already used the system in a limited operational way during times of atmospheric disturbances which affect ordinary straight-line communications.

The Navy said that eventually the moon relay system might be adapted to "bouncing" and receiving messages from ships at sea or to man-made satellites. The new system, as well as being largely immune to atmospheric disturbances, would also escape most enemy "jamming" in time of war, it added.

The operation of the system between Washington and Hawaii is only possible when the moon is visible at both places.—Reuter.

'Hair-shaving' commander dismissed

Seoul, Jan. 28. The American Army officer who allegedly ordered two Korean prostitutes found in his men's barracks to have their hair cut off, has been:

- Summarily relieved of his command.
- Fined US$250.
- Given a severe reprimand.

The United Nations command in Korea said this in a statement released today.

The officer is Captain Thomas H. Goode, aged 34, of Suffolk, Virginia, the company commander.

The statement said the two Korean women suffered no injuries or bodily harm requiring medical attention.

It said units of the Seventh Division had experienced a serious problem with prostitutes soliciting military personnel in spite of Korean law and security precautions taken by U.S. Forces.—Reuter.

British loan for UAR

London, Jan. 27. The Chancellor of the Exchequer Mr. Derek Heathcoat Amory has indicated the Government approve a £20 million loan to the United Arab Republic to improve the Suez Canal.

The Chancellor made the statement during a question period yesterday at the opening session of Parliament.

Amory said "It was the judgment of the staff of the World Bank that the loan was financially sound and all things considered the Government concurred."—UPI.

Shooting incident in N. Ireland

Belfast, Jan. 28. Gunmen opened fire on police last night at a lonely station on the Northern Ireland side of the Irish border.

The incident, the first of its kind for three months, took place at Roslea County Fermanagh. Automatic weapons were used by the raiders.—AP.

CHEERS GREET MAC AT BIG RECEPTION IN JOHANNESBURG

Johannesburg, Jan. 28. Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, was honoured by the city of Johannesburg at a reception today.

A mayoral reception was given to mark his visit to the "Golden City." A thousand guests attended.

Cheers and shouts of "Good Old Mac" greeted the Prime Minister when he stressed the importance of the British Commonwealth to guests at the reception tonight.

A DUTY

Mr Macmillan said there were differences between South Africa and Britain—but the Commonwealth was based on "a deep mutual understanding" between people of different races, creeds and traditions. Its future, he said, depended on the nations working towards a common unity and purpose.

Mr Macmillan said in the world scene, with American and the West on one hand and Russia on the other, the Commonwealth "may have a special contribution to make."

"We have to cling to that unity of purpose of which I spoke and not just this year or next," he added. "Let us understand the world and remember we have a duty."—Reuter.

AUSTRALIA WINS TEST SERIES AGAINST INDIA

Fifth match ends in a tame draw

Calcutta, Jan. 28.
Australia won their five-match cricket Test series against India, when the fifth and final game ended here today in a draw.

The Australians won two Tests, India one and the other two were drawn.

Final scores in the fifth Test were: India 194 and 339, Australia 331 and 121 for two wickets.

India fought a magnificent rearguard action here today in the final day of the match.

M. L. Jaisimha, who is still at University, was India's saviour with a confident 74, including eight fours. He was aided by a sterling 62 by Ramnath Kenny, enabling India to finish with 339 in their second innings shortly after lunch.

The Australians, playing the last match of their tour, needed 203 in 158 minutes to win, but made no attempt to get the run.

Australia, assured of the rubber by a draw, and possibly thinking the task a bit stiff, played out the game in a subdued manner. They were 121 for the loss of Colin McDonald and Neil Harvey at the close.

Colony forwards fail

PERUVIAN FOOTBALLERS MAKE PLEASING DEBUT TO BEAT DISAPPOINTING HONGKONG XI

By I. M. MacTAVISH

The visiting Peruvians opened their series of games in the Colony by beating a sadly disappointing All-Hongkong side before a capacity crowd at the Government Stadium on Thursday. The South Americans won by two clear goals after being one up at the interval.

The visitors created a good impression without ever being seriously extended. They were a big strong side and they showed excellent ball control in everything but the art of shooting. Their finishing was weak. If they had been able to shoot as skilfully as they built up their attacks the home team would have taken a heavy beating.

It was most interesting to see the Peruvians adopt the continental line-up. They employed the three full-backs and two half-backs formation with the centre-half wearing the No. 3 shirt, the left-back the No. 4 and the wing halves the Nos. 5 and 6. The players showed a good understanding of each other's intentions and although they never seemed to be racing or charging about it was surprising how quickly they could move the ball from one end of the field to the other.

They made excellent use of the open space and it was noticeable how intelligently the men not in possession moved into position to receive the ball. Some fine players

Yet there is a lingering doubt about the real merits of the side for in Hong Kong's two short periods of superiority the visitors lost their air of calm control far too easily to inspire confidence. The local boys had a couple of good spells during the first half when they should have been on the Peruvians' heels.

Nevertheless they had some very fine players and goalkeeper Carpena in particular created a big impression. His clutching and clearing and his thrilling fearless dashes from his goal-line to smother loose balls were examples of the art of goalkeeping.

The other five-star performer was left-back Andrade who put a very quick damper on Wong Chi-yeung's frisking and free kicking. Andrade, who was one of the players who wore Peru's colours in the famous victory over England, showed tremendous tenacity in the tackle and he looked every inch an international star.

Superb footwork

The other eye-catching visitors were in the forward line. Carpena and Montalvo, who also played in the Peruvian side against England, revealed superb footwork and delightful ball control.

The inside-right got the first goal after a clever defence splitting burst of inter-passing and his partnership with Briceno was always attractive to watch until it came to the final effort and usually that was well wide of the mark.

Drago was the purveyor of passes and although he wore the No. 9 shirt he was usually to be found operating far behind the rest of the forward line. He played his part extremely well and he created enough openings for his mates to have run up a big score...but, oh, that Peruvian shooting!

The Hongkong side disappointed most of all by its lack of spirit. The players, with few exceptions, were listless and lifeless and as a result their teamwork was generally insipid.

A sad failure

Little Au Chi-yeung—the Hongkong skipper—was a sad failure. He was outclassed by Bolivar the towering pivot opposed to him but even in the open space the Police centre-forward was right out of touch.

Wing-halves Kwok Yau and Kwok Kam-hung were clever enough in possession but they were too easily brushed aside by the strong Peruvian inside-forwards. The real Hongkong weaknesses, however, were in the front rank where only Yiu Cheuk-yin played to anything like his true form...and even then much of his best work was completely wasted on an immature partner.

That leaves Leung Kun, the KMB leftwinger, who was making his debut in representative football. He started off well enough and I think he has a very promising future but, taken over the place, he also goes down as one of the big failures. Time after time he was caught watching Yiu Cheuk-yin rather than trying to anticipate the inside-left's intentions. Pass after pass he simply through lack of anticipation...and experience...he must be given another chance: he has talent and

WALES TO MAKE SEVEN CHANGES IN RUGBY TEAM AGAINST SCOTLAND

Cardiff, Jan. 28.

The Welsh Rugby Union selectors provided some shocks tonight when they announced the team to meet Scotland at Cardiff Arms Park on February 6.

By leaving two vacancies and making five changes, the selectors made it possible that altogether there would be seven changes from the side beaten 14-6 by England at Twickenham on January 10.

Biggest shock was the dropping of the captain and second row forward, Rhys Williams, in favour of Cardiff player Danny Harris. Three other members of the last British Lions team in Australia and New Zealand were left out—full-back Terry Davies, wing-forward Haydn Morgan and number eight forward John Faulkner.

Full-back, Eion Jones, in place of Colin Davis at scrum-half, while the other definite change is the introduction of a new cap, Eion Jones, in place of John Collins on the right wing. The other vacancy apart from full-back is in the second row, from which G. W. Payne has been omitted. Skipped Rhys Williams may still be considered.

The selectors named no new full-back, however, and hinted that they will have a final look at Davies when he plays for Llanelly against Wasps in London on Saturday.

Faulkner and Morgan are replaced respectively by Glyn Davies and Geoff Whiston, who make up an all-Newport backrow with their clubmate Brian Crosswell. Ollivier Enece, who last played for Wales in 1957, is recalled in place of Colin Davis at scrum-half, while the other definite change is the introduction of a new cap, Eion Jones, in place of John Collins on the right wing. The other vacancy apart from full-back is in the second row, from which G. W. Payne has been omitted. Skipped Rhys Williams may still be considered.

The visitors now had complete command although in one Hongkong breakaway it took a magnificent flying clutch by Carpena to stop Lau Chi-lam's header.

In the 63rd minute tragedy struck at the local side. Centre-forward Drago juggled the ball into shooting position but Wright seemed to have his shot well covered until hopeless Kwok Yau put his head to the ball and diverted it into his own net for the Peruvians' second and final goal.

VERDICT: The visitors were deserving winners for, on the day's play, they were the better footballers. The Hongkong side was a big disappointment. The game was an astonishing chapter of confusion when the referee awarded an indirect free-kick, eight yards from the Peruvian goal-line. The visitors seemed strangely unfamiliar with the rule governing such a situation. The game was fair holiday entertainment but I feel we have yet to see the best of these colourful footballers from Peru.

Three tennis stars taken on the carpet

Brisbane, Jan. 27.
Three leading Australian lawn tennis players—Bob Mark (Victoria), Bob Hewitt (New South Wales) and Frank Gorman (Queensland)—were today carpeted by the Tournament Committee of the Australian Championships, which are taking place here.

Their offences: display of bad temper during the championships' early rounds. All three had been reported by umpires for misconduct and had been criticised freely in the press for alleged displays of bad temper.

DEALT WITH
Chairman of the Tournament Committee is Mr C. A. Edwards—the man who has sworn to stamp out bad manners on Australia's tennis courts.

Mr Edwards, who is President of the Queensland Lawn Tennis Association, said: "The three players have been brought before the committee and have been dealt with in a suitable manner, and we feel that they will not transgress again."

Wilson Jones wins Indian billiards title

Calcutta, Jan. 27.
Wilson Jones, holder of the World Amateur Billiards Championship, won the Indian National title here today defeating S. N. Banerjee by 4,178 points to 2,831. This is the seventh time Jones has won the Indian championship.—Reuter.

Manila, Jan. 28.
Here is how they finished as the seven-nation first Asian Basketball Championship came to a close tonight: (first figures: Won—second figures: Lost) Philippines—9-0; Taiwan—7-2; Japan—5-4; South Korea—3-0; Hongkong—2-4; Indonesia—1-5; Malaysia—0-6.

The four-nation final round did not include Hongkong, Indonesia and Malaysia who ceased activity after the preliminary round on January 22 and landed fifth, sixth and seven places respectively.—AFP.

SATURDAY SPORTS SPOT

There must be a way to "hold the Tigers" together

By I. M. MacTAVISH

If the whispers and the expressions of opinion are to be believed it would seem there is a real possibility of one of the darker chapters in Hongkong football history repeating itself.

The knowing ones are making no effort to hide the fact that they fear the promising young Sing Tao side will be ravaged of its talent at the end of the season.

Football news from other lands

By ARCHIE QUICK

In the Argentine they have introduced heavy fines for fouling, and a player may have between £25 and £35 deducted from his wages for kicking or hitting an opponent. Infractions have dropped by fifty per cent.

In Austria, when a referee takes a player's name, the player has a black mark put against him in a register. Five black marks earn a week's suspension.

Argentina, by the way, are smarting under a 4-2 defeat by Chile. It was the first time they had been defeated by that country in 49 years—42 matches in all.

Chinese players, coached by Hungarians and Russians, have made great advances in their standard of play. Hungary's Olympic side, for instance, beat the Russian "B" side in Moscow 2-0, but could only draw 1-1 in Peking against China. They lost a second match by an only goal.

There were 80,000 people present—an eye-opener surely for the Western world.

France are giving their international players an identity card so that they may watch any game in the country free of charge.

Chile have organised an enterprising European tour as preparation for the 1962 World Cup series of which they are hosts.

Their national side will play Portugal at Lisbon in March, and they follow with games against France in Paris, Switzerland at Bern, and Lausanne, Germany at a venue yet to be chosen, and Spain at Barcelona.

A few years ago the officials of Sing Tao found themselves faced with the sad realization that their team was growing old. In the line-up they had many famous names but reputation, willingness and spirit do not win precious League points and the club had to face up to the problem of finding replacements.

An enterprising and far-sighted team-building campaign was undertaken. The old hands were gradually eased out of the side and promising untied youngsters were blooded in their place. The blend of youth and experience, guided and coached by grand veteran sportsmen like Bobby Hornbail and Harry Hsu Yung-sang, began to click... the fabulous Jets were born.

What names!

What names there were in that line-up! Unknown at the time but stars to-day. In the Jets' electrifying side there were youngsters like Lo Kwok-tai, Wong Kwok-keo, Wong Tak-choo, Young Wai-to, and a little earlier, Ho Cheung-yau. All of them are now with big name clubs.

In one fell swoop the cream of what could have been one of the finest young sides in the Colony's post-war competitions scattered and joined the ranks of other sides. The fire in the remaining Jets subsided. Sing Tao were back in the doldrums.

The thankless search for promising talent had to start all over again but as first division players do not grow on trees the process was a long one. The Tigers had to survive two very ordinary seasons. They had to fight hard to keep their heads above the low water mark of relegation.

Few hopes

At the start of this season there were few hopes that the Sing Tao side would achieve very much. Most judges considered the team too young and too inexperienced to offer any serious challenge to the star-studded teams they would have to meet.

Certainly there was nothing in the Tigers' early form to suggest that the prophets were wrong, but suddenly the confidence and patience—of the Sing Tao officials were rewarded. All the long hours of coaching and training began to pay off. The youngsters in the familiar yellow and black shirts began to find that their speed, and their instinctive understanding with each other, gave them a powerful weapon on the field. They were no longer outsiders. The confidence of the officials was mirrored in the players and with it came a bubbling new sense of team spirit.

Victories

The Tigers were back. The fire of the Jets was rekindled in new personalities. Victories over Eastern and Kitchener in successive weeks showed very clearly just how things were developing... but they also brought a realization of the youngsters' potential to the notice of those folks who are interested only in established stars... or ready-made top class material.

At least seven of the present line-up give promise of being tomorrow's potential interlopers. Young, enthusiastic, talented, fast in thought and movement, they have brought back a feeling of optimism to Hongkong football... and that is a fact which has not been missed by the roving eyes.

It is true that in a free democratic 'amateur' competition it is unthinkable that any restriction should be placed on the freedom of players to decide which colours they will wear.

At the same time one cannot help but feel that domestic homey clubs like Sing Tao, who work tremendously hard to find, develop, and coach raw ability into polished talent deserve some sort of guarantee or assurance that they will be given a reasonable chance to enjoy the pleasure of their work.

Club loyalty

How can there ever be any real desire to search for up-and-coming boys, train them, coach them and encourage them when there is the undercurrent of feeling that as soon as the new comer catches the public eye he will be offered a peg in someone else's dressing room?

The big-time players exercise tremendous power in Hongkong football and there is not the slightest doubt that they are molly-coddled by the FA.

By all means give the players a fair crack of the whip; by all means give them a fair slice of liberty... but never let us lose sight of the fact that club loyalty and team spirit are the two greatest ingredients in the game. Those clubs who work hard to give the game fresh new personalities deserve some protection from the Hongkong Football Association. It is a tragedy that a club like Sing Tao, for example, should do so much pioneering work yet be constantly haunted by the thought that at the end of every season they may lose the star services of players they have brought from obscurity to headlines in the sports pages of the local press. I know that already there is a feeling abroad that only an end-of-May miracle will enable Sing Tao to keep their present players for next season.

Is there a remedy? Is there any other way by which the geriatric team-building clubs can be assured that they will be able to keep the players they find and develop for a reasonable time?

An interesting point was made in my presence the other day when one who has the welfare of football at heart proposed that young players under 21 years of age should be tied by agreement to their club for a period of longer than one season.

Must be protected

For very obvious reasons such a proposal would meet with the strongest opposition in certain places... and yet for equally obvious reasons it could be a wonderful thing for the stability of Hongkong football.

The Sing Tao in our midst need all the encouragement they can get. They must be protected from a 1960 repetition of the player-matching which destroyed the famous Jets... one of the most entertaining sides we have had the pleasure of watching in recent years... and potentially one of the greatest.

The Hongkong Amateur Boxing Association should follow the advice in an old saying... "Strike while the iron is hot."

Last Saturday night the Southern Playground resounded once again to the roars, cheers, banter... yes, and even the boos, of a typically excited boxing crowd. The smile of resin, the thud of leather on flesh and the characteristic sportsmanship of the boxers combined to provide excellent entertainment. The fans must have been well satisfied with the return they got for their money... and, on the basis that a satisfied customer will come back for more, the HKABA should launch immediate plans to stage another promotion in the very near future.

No worries

Boxing deserves a prominent place in our sporting affairs and, if the public can be assured of regular programmes as good as the one presented last Saturday, there would be no worries about support.

The value of men like Henry Wong and Fong Ki-kong was again adequately demonstrated. It seems that the immediate future of boxing in Hongkong depends to a great extent on the finding of suitable Chinese replacements for these willing, but aging, veterans.

It could be that the immediate answer lies in the promising fists and big heart of young Eddie Woo who, although beaten, created a good impression in his first appearance at the World Refugee Year Charity Show.

The tall thin youngster has an intelligent appreciation of the basic points of the game. He is as plucky as they come... but if they wish to help him on the way to the top, the HKABA should try to arrange for him to train and spar with British boxers... preferably from the Services.

Too many of our young Chinese boxers try to model their style on Henry Wong. That is understandable... but nothing could be less suitable for a man of Woo's physical makeup than attempting to follow in Henry Wong's footsteps. The stocky old Colony champion has a very short reach and his particular style has been developed to overcome it. His well known 'get-inside' tactics were essential to his ring plan.

Woo has an unusually long reach. He must be schooled to develop a strong left-hand attack in the traditional British style and that is why I say it would pay rich pugilistic dividends to get him the right kind of training and coaching.

Could help

If Billy Tingle, who has now become active again in adult boxing, could spare the time he could help the Chinese boy along the road to fame better than anyone else I know. Billy, with the experience of his own great ring career in world class professional boxing behind him, is patient but firm... diligent but direct. Could young Woo ask for a better guide?

This week's televiewers have a soccer flavour. South China's registered colour is red. Kitchener's is blue. Apparently to add variety to last Sunday's big game the teams swapped colours! Anything goes and no one seems to mind.

"See you in Manila" is the current catch phrase down the alley. Even the Peruvians are using it!!!

FOUR FRIENDLY RUGBY GAMES THIS AFTERNOON

By PAK LO

Four rugby 'friendlies' are listed on the fixture card for this afternoon, with the major game of the day being the one between Club "A" and the Sappers on the Army Boundary Street ground at 4.30 p.m. In an earlier match on the same ground, the Gunners of 32nd Medium Regiment are at home to the Police at 3.15 p.m., while at Kai Tak at the same time, the Airmen from Kai Tak entertain 49th Field Regiment.

On the other side of the harbour at Sookunpo, Club "B" take the field at 4.30 p.m. against the 1st Royal Tanks.

The two games at Boundary Street are expected to draw the crowds and in the first game, the Police, on paper, produce without difficulty a certain victory.

But the Police on paper and the Police in practice, especially in a "friendly", are two very different things, and in these minor matches they always seem to lack the fire that comes to them in a Tournament game.

It does not seem to matter who is not available in the Police lineup. Give them the hard game and they play like champions. Give them an easy one and they play like tyros. This all leads up to the fact that the result of this game should be a fairly even and open match.

Better forwards

Police certainly have the better forwards, and this should ensure a steady supply of the ball, whereas 32nd Medium have a good set of backs who could play havoc with the Police defence if they get the ball. They should get a certain amount of it, but it will be insufficient to ensure victory for the Gunners, and Police should leave the field wearing the victor's laurels.

In the Club versus Sappers match, the Sappers have a very strong pack which should more than hold the Club back. The latter, of late, have lost a lot of their fire, but are still a force to be reckoned with in the loose. Behind the scrum Club are much superior and with a reasonable supply of the ball should have no trouble in breaking through and producing a winning score, for in the backs Sappers have the weakest links.

The favourites

At Kai Tak the Gunners take the field the favourites, for though not a terribly strong team, their pack is better than the Airmen's, and this should make the difference, for though the halves are fairly equal, the RAT three still lack that extra punch that could give them a try.

Club "B" are weaker, this weekend at Sookunpo, but have proved capable, all too often, of upsetting stronger teams and forcing a draw. The Tanks have the faster three, and with fairly well balanced packs should win after a scrappy battle.

England score 382 all out

BARRINGTON HITS SECOND CENTURY AGAINST W. INDIES

Port of Spain, Jan. 29.
England did well today to take their overnight total of 220 for 4 to 382 all out on the second day of the second test in Trinidad.

Credit for this must go to Ken Barrington, who hit 121, his second century in the series, and Mike Smith, big, blonde, bespectacled Warwickshire captain who scored an intelligent 108.

Although the pitch did not encourage the pace bowlers, Wesley Hall and Charles Watson were able to get the ball to lift and at times Chinese umpire Eric Lee Kow advised Watson to pitch then up.

Alexander, whose fielding is a great inspiration to his youthful side, took an acrobatic catch to dismiss Barrington off Hall, and shortly after Illingworth and Swetman fell victims of Ramadhin and Watson.

Trueman held up his end with some commonsense batting but when he left Worrell figured in the dismissals of the last two men by grabbing a magnificent catch to remove Smith and knocking Statham's stump out of the ground.

At stumps the West Indies were 22 for none, Solomon 14 and Hunte 6.

Left fortune

London, Jan. 28.
A Polish-born tailor who had to borrow sixpence to buy a meal when he arrived in Britain at the turn of the century left £332,320 when he died last year, it was revealed today.

Runaway heiress relents

New York, Jan. 28.
Runaway heiress Gamble Benedict told a judge privately today that she is willing to stay with her family and not see her chauffeur swain as long as he is married.

Justice Samuel M. Gold revealed the promise from the 19-year-old heiress in adjourning a State Supreme Court hearing into whether Gamble is being detained by her grandmother against her will.

"She is willing to continue to live with her grandmother," Gold announced after a private conference with the Remington typewriter heiress.—AP.

Victorian batsman shows form against NSW

Sydney, Jan. 29.
John Shaw, Victorian batsman who has been chosen for the Australian "B" team to tour New Zealand, took an impressive 90 off the New South Wales attack on the opening day of the Sheffield Shield match here today.

Shaw, who batted for 201 minutes, led his team to 240 for six — the score when bad light ended play 35 minutes early.

With John Potter, another New Zealand tourist, Shaw shared a dashing fifth-wicket partnership which put on 72 in 53 minutes. Then Victoria's captain Len Maddocks joined him for a sixth-wicket stand which produced 62 in 46 minutes.

Left-arm spinner John May was New South Wales' most successful bowler with three for 73 from 20 overs, — China Mail Special.

S. Australia saved from collapse

Adelaide, Jan. 29.
A hardhitting innings of 139 by Neil Daniell saved South Australia from collapse on the first day of their Sheffield Shield match against Western Australia here today.

South Australia, who were 42 for three at one stage, were 200 for five at the close.

Daniell scored his 139 in four hours 24 minutes. He hit 16 fours.

"Fast bowler" Ron Gaunt was most impressive in the Western Australian attack. He took the first four wickets at a personal cost of 20 runs and finished the day with figures of 4 for 42.—China Mail Special.

Empire Games

Perth, WA, Jan. 20.
The Empire Games organising council announced today that the dates of the 1962 Games to be held in Perth have been amended.

The Games will now start on November 8 and end on November 17, allowing two weekends to be included in the period.

Originally the opening was planned for November 10.—Reuters.

Women jockeys get a break

Alberta, Jan. 24.
Women jockeys will be allowed in the same races as men at the annual Millerville, Alberta, racing meeting in July.

The local racing association said it was difficult to find enough male jockeys.—China Mail Special.

Britain plans biggest nuclear plant

London, Jan. 28.
Britain's Ministry of Power today approved plans for construction of the world's biggest nuclear power station.

It will be built at Sizewell, on the east coast of southern England, at a cost of between £60 million and £65 million.

Scheduled for completion in 1965, the station's two-reactors will provide a capacity of 650 megawatts—30 megawatts more than a nuclear plant in Siberia which the Russians now claim as the world's biggest.

Britain now has two nuclear power stations in operation and five under construction. Two others are still in the planning stage.—AP.

Watches and pens sent by post to PI

Manila, Jan. 27.
The Philippine Bureau of Posts has discovered 20 watches and a number of Parker pens and handkerchiefs in a package from Hongkong which was supposed to have contained tea.

The package was addressed to a woman in Tacuban City, southern Philippines.

Bureau officials said this was the second time in four days similar items declared as tea had been discovered in the mail.—Reuters.

English football

London, Jan. 29.
Walsall beat Barrow 2-1 in an English Division IV football match at Walsall tonight.

The match, the only league game played today, was brought forward from tomorrow's fixtures.—Reuters.

Search below ground for three men missing since 1956

Birmingham, Ala, Jan. 29.
Highway workmen are punching big holes in a road near here in a search for three men missing nearly four years.

Drilling crews, under police supervision, have sunk 55 holes in the roadbed on Alabama 79 and its vicinity near a railroad underpass.

Police Chief Thomas H. Ward of suburban Fairfield started the unusual hunt when he said a tipster told him the three men were murdered and their car driven into a hole during construction of this section of highway in March 1956.

Police suggest that the killers then used construction machinery to shove the car with dirt.

Engineers went over the area with a powerful metal detecting device on Wednesday but failed to find any trace of the metal beneath the roadbed. They said the electronic equipment could locate metal 12 to 18 feet beneath the surface.

The missing men are Billy Dye, 49, his brother, Robert Dye, 45, and their cousin, Dan Dye, 35.—AP.

CHRISTINE TRUMAN BEATEN

Brisbane, Jan. 29.
Christine Truman was beaten in the women's singles semi-finals of the Australian Lawn Tennis Championships here today.

The 16-year-old British girl was defeated 7-5, 3-6, 7-5 by Jan Lehane of Australia.

The defeat of Miss Truman, who was favourite for the title, was the second major upset in the women's event, following Wimbledon champion Martina Bueno's defeat against the 17-year-old Australian Margaret Smith on Wednesday.

Miss Truman, who was seeded No. 2 behind Miss Bueno, took over as favourite after the Brazilian girl's elimination.

AFFECTED BY CRAMP

Miss Truman, like Miss Bueno on Wednesday, was badly affected by cramp. The British girl ended the long, exhausting match — which was played in steamy, tropical weather — with cramp in her leg and hand.

Miss Lehane, too, was exhausted — and collapsed on her return to the dressing room.—Reuters.

U.S.-Russia lend-lease talks off

Washington, Jan. 28.
The State Department announced yesterday that the United States had broken off lend-lease talks with the Soviet Union.

America accused the Russians of improperly attempting to raise trade matters at the conversations.

The State Department spokesman said later that the Soviet delegates had attempted to include such matters as a trade agreement and U.S. credit to Russia in the proposed settlement of Soviet wartime debts.

The talks began here on January 11 and both sides had met today for the fourth time.

Mr. Lincoln White, the State Department spokesman, read a statement to reporters which said in part:

"In view of the absence of agreement between the two governments concerning the terms of reference of these negotiations, there would appear to be no common ground for their continuance at this time." —Reuters.
